

Matti Nojonen, Professor of Chinese culture and society at University of Lapland, Finland. Nojonen has a Ph.D. from Helsinki School of Economics and Masters in Sinology from Stockholm University and has been working for a decade in Chinese key Universities. Nojonen has been working on traditional Chinese political philosophy, traditional and contemporary strategic culture, and on contemporary issues such as; Chinese Arctic policies, networks (guanxi) in business, institutional and value base changes in China, institutional reform policy, and direct and indirect impact of Chinese over-seas direct investments. Nojonen has also keen interest in traditional Chinese strategic thinking and has published annotated and comparative translation into Finnish language of Han and Song-dynasty editions of Sunzi's Art of War and an analytical translations into Finnish language of sixty four Chinese strategy classics (Art of Stratagem). Both books were published by Helsinki University Gaudeamus Press. Currently Nojonen is working on comparing provincial level BRI policies, Chinese Arctic policies and a book project "The Art of Strategem - role of concepts in Chinese (traditional) strategic thinking".
